Factsheet

MARKET COMMENTARY

It was a difficult month for equity markets as higher-than-expected inflation data pushed back expectations for interest rate cuts. In the US, headline inflation and core inflation were reported at 3.5% and 3.8%, respectively, and the S&P 500 fell by 4.08%. Elsewhere in developed markets, Europe and the UK relatively outperformed as their inflation prints raised prospects that interest rate cuts by the European Central Bank and the Bank of England might come sooner. Eurozone inflation remained flat at 2.4%, and UK inflation fell to 3.2%. Europe ex-UK equities fell by 1.81%, while the UK posted relatively strong gains of 2.72%. Japanese equities lost their momentum as the Bank of Japan held interest rates near zero and the Japanese Yen fell to a 34-year low. The Nikkei 225 index fell 4.39%. Emerging markets were buoyed by a renewed interest in low-valued Chinese stocks, with the Shanghai Stock Exchange up 3.15%. Fixed income markets were also negatively affected by the new interest rate cut expectations. The US 10-year Treasury yield rose by 37 basis points to 4.68%, and the 10-year UK Gilt yield also moved higher, ending the month at 4.34%. The Bloomberg Global Aggregate Index was down by 2.54%, and the Bloomberg Global High Yield Index fell by 0.84%. Commodities were notable outperformers, with the Bloomberg Commodity Index up by 2.69%. Precious metals continued their strong run with gold prices up by 2.53% and silver prices up by 5.33%. Oil prices continued to trade at a geopolitical premium, rising 0.43% (Brent) due to increased tensions in the Middle East.
